I was very much enjoying the first cricket test played in Perth last week. Our Australian bowlers performed incredibly well and the opening batsmen had us in a dominant position. Then things changed suddenly and Australia lost 10 wickets rapidly turning a position of strength into one of vulnerability. It didn’t take long before the media was up to its usual practice of analysing every movement of each batsman, dissecting it in slow motion and offering opinions on who should stay in the team and who should be dropped. It didn’t matter if two matches ago the same media were praising the same batsmen for strong performances.

Several weeks ago the AFL was in frenzy as they staged their annual trade week. A considerable number of players were rated and decisions made by others about their value and worth to clubs. Some players survived for another season while others were traded away or delisted and told they were no longer wanted, they weren’t considered good enough for the club.

It seems to me so many people these days are required in work and life to constantly prove that they are good enough, their performance is worthy of staying and that they should being retained. Living that way, constantly trying to prove your worth creates enormous pressure and quite a burden to carry each day.

It’s quite peculiar that when it comes to God, we are actually told by him that even though we are never good enough to keep his laws and meet his standards, he has arranged it through Jesus’ death and resurrection that he will always see us as worthy and acceptable when we accept his gift of forgiveness through faith. He couldn’t have made it any clearer but somehow we can fall into the trap of thinking we can actually be good enough and try to earn his free gift.

As Pastor Clayton shared in chapel last week, even though we don’t deserve to be in God’s family, he accepts us and makes us part of his family, because of Jesus, by grace.

When you come to understand this, it is an incredibly freeing experience to know that God never wants to drop us from his team, trade us or delist. He wants to keep us in his family for all eternity.

For it is by grace you have been saved, through faith—and this is not from yourselves, it is the gift of God. Ephesians 2:8

This year November 11th marks the 98th anniversary of the Armistice which ended the First World War (1914–18). On this day each year St Mark’s observes one minute’s silence at 11:00 am in memory of those who died or suffered in all wars and armed conflicts.

War By Tayla Arbon
War looks like horrified faces running for their lives.
War sounds like rockslides falling as soldiers climb mountains.
War smells like damp soil from the blood of dead bodies.
War tastes like old and stale ANZAC biscuits.
War feels like mixed emotions as people shoot and fight.

War By Lucas Breadnam
War looks like triggers pulled back and lead flying.
War sounds like bombs going ‘Bang’ and screams calling out.
War smells like smoke from the bomb flames.
War tastes like blood in your mouth.
War feels like being brave and proud.

War By Billy Sumerling
War looks like people dropping like flies.
War sounds like cries for help and then silence.
War smells like blood and sweaty people.
War tastes like dirt and salty waters.
War feels like mates being lost and hearts being broken.

War By Caitlyn Brooks
War looks like big bombs exploding.
War sounds like guns firing at soldiers.
War smells like smoke in the air.
War tastes like defeat.
War feels like sadness from the loss of mates.

War By Hamish Wheeler
War looks like trenches full of dead bloody soldiers.
War sounds like exploding bombs blowing soldiers off the ground.
War smells like gunpowder being fired out of an AK-47.
War tastes like painful lead pellets firing into muscles, hearts and lungs.

War By Layla Martlew
War looks like people dropping dead by the minute.
War sounds like people crying like a baby.
War smells like gunpowder shooting through.
War tastes like blood dripping off the bodies of hope.
War feels like sadness flowing through bodies.

War By Madison Doyle
War looks like blood spitting, guns shooting.
War sounds like people screaming, bombs exploding.
War smells like smoke wafting through the air.
War tastes like mud splashing, sickness spilling.
War feels like lonely people with hearts breaking.

War By Hayley Doughty
War looks like death everywhere.
War sounds like little boys screaming.
War smells like salt water on my bloody hands.
War tastes like tears of sadness dripping on me.
War feels like helping my country.

Life in a Refugee Camp: Tragedy, resilience and hope

Earlier this year, Cornerstone teacher Andrew Wells spent two weeks in the country of Djibouti (situated on the Horn of Africa) visiting and teaching in the refugee camps located there.

Andrew’s presentation will be a great opportunity to learn and find out about the country of Djibouti, how refugee camps are run, what life is like in a refugee camp and how people end up in refugee camps.

He has already been interviewed on ABC 891 Afternoon Show and Power FM about his experience. It promises to be a very informative evening.
